A State May Not Curtail Power of Judiciary To Issue Injunction To Prevent Injury To Property Rights By Boycotting and Picketing—Unlawful Conspiracy Must Always Be Subject To Check Of Courts—Held That Arizona Law Was Improperly Construed—Most Important Case Ever Brought In Industrial Dispute of This Character
The court has ruled that a state may not curtail the power of the judiciary to issue injunctions to prevent injury to property rights. The court also held that an unlawful conspiracy must always be subject to the check of the courts.

Washington, Dec. 16—States in the exercise of their police power have no authority through legislative action to prohibit courts from enjoining picketing in labor disputes, the supreme court held today in a decision involving an act of Arizona.
In the opinion, on which the court divided five to four, it was held that the lower courts erred in refusing to consider an application for an injunction which was sought to restrain certain methods of picketing. Chief Justice Taft delivered the opinion. Justices Holmes, Pitney and Brandeis separately stated dissenting views and Justice Clarke joined in the opinion announced by Justice Pitney.
